

GLO Thematic Report on rangelands and pastoralists

Call for case studies and good practices

The United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification (UNCCD) is preparing a Global Land Outlook (GLO) Thematic Report comprehensively analysing the dynamics linking pastoralists and the land they use, namely rangelands. The report will show evidence on how sustainable rangeland management and rehabilitation contribute to achieving land degradation neutrality, improved livelihoods, and ecosystem restoration worldwide. Furthermore, the focus is to provide guidance on how the development of community and country-based initiatives on pastoralism, from policy and legal frameworks to investments and projects, can successfully contribute to multiple Sustainable Development Goals in the different regions of the world.

This GLO Thematic Report will be evidence-based, fully referenced, and informed by experts and key stakeholders. As the core of the report will be actual lessons learned on the ground, UNCCD is actively searching for remarkable initiatives related to pastoralists and rangelands from across the world. The report will present a selection of the most stimulating experiences shared from each region, building analysis and recommendations upon their challenges, solutions, and results.

Thus, UNCCD invites countries, organizations and individuals to share their experiences and innovative approaches to improving rangeland management and the livelihoods of pastoral communities. The case studies or good practices can be policies, plans, programs and projects that foster sustainable land management practices, inclusive governance and participation, capacity building, social innovation and other approaches to improve the health of rangelands and their resources. The authors and organizations submitting the experiences will be duly credited.

If you are interested in submitting an existing or ongoing initiative, please fill out the attached template and send to both globalpolicyadvocacy@unccd.int and pherrera@unccd.int indicating in the subject line “GLO Rangelands and Pastoralists, contribution from” and the country or region where your initiative is located.
